320,184

Students reached by our publications

Representing ten world-class international universities—Yale, Cambridge, Peking, Sydney, Toronto, Cape Town, Sciences-Po, Bogazici, Hebrew University, and St. Stephen's College—Global21 networks tens of thousands of future leaders. In an increasingly interconnected world, Global21 provides a forum for the leaders of tomorrow to engage with the most pressing issues of today.

Articles published annually in print

Quarterly publications printed in the national language of each chapter and translated into English expose students to disparate and often divergent perspectives. Global21's Annual Publication, a compendium integrating focused analyses from each of our chapters, will be translated into every language represented by the organization and will be distributed not only to students, but also to leaders in business, government, academia, and the media.

Staff members worldwide

Global21's staff works across borders to produce a portfolio of publications that are provocative, dynamic, and insightful. Students are responsible for every aspect of production, from writing and editing to business development, marketing, information technology, graphic design, operations management, and publication. Through their work in Global21, students gain hands-on experience in the complex task of managing a global enterprise.

Continents represented

Spanning eleven countries and five continents, Global21 strives for global reach. In Phase I of its expansion, we targeted premier universities in the English-speaking world, China, and Israel. In Phase II, we will expand operations into the European Union and Japan, while establishing strategic chapters in India, Brazil, South Africa, Colombia, Mexico, and Egypt. By 2009, Global21 plans to establish twenty-one chapters on six continents, reaching over 700,000 students with content in nine languages.

Network linking future world leaders

There is no other organization quite like Global21. While other organizations have rhetoric on international harmony, we represent a product focused enterprise that harnesses some of the world's most talented young minds—regardless of nationality, race, language, religion, or ideological grounding—to produce incisive, professional publications on issues of international import. Our mission is to create a network of future world leaders who communicate lucidly, think globally, and have the know-how to turn ideas into action.
